

IMMIGRANTS RIGHTS RESOURCES

If you are an immigrant living in Oregon, you have guaranteed rights regardless of your citizenship status. Whether you are interacting with ICE, are under DACA, or facing employment/student discrimination, it is important to be informed of your rights and stay prepared for any scenario.

The resources in this document are provided by the ACLU of Oregon and includes resources developed by the national ACLU. This document also includes contact information for law firms and organizations in Oregon who aim to be accessible to community members who seek assistance navigating our complex immigration system. Please note that ACLU of Oregon, national ACLU, and law firms and organizations listed in this document cannot guarantee legal services, counsel, or representation. If you are an attorney and would like to be added to this resource guide, please contact lkwon@aclu-or.org.

If Law Enforcement Asks About Your Immigration Status:

- You have the right to remain silent and do not have to discuss your immigration or citizenship status with police, immigration agents, or other officials. Anything you tell an officer can later be used against you in immigration court.
- If you are not a U.S. citizen and an immigration agent requests your immigration papers, you must show them if you have them with you. This requirement only applies to immigration agents. You do not have to show any documents to local or state police, except that you do have to show a valid drivers' license if police pull you over for a traffic violation.
- If the police or an immigration agent asks if they can search you, you have the right to say no. Agents generally do not have the right to search you or your belongings without your permission or a warrant.
- If you're over 18 and are not a U.S. citizen, carry your papers with you at all times. If you don't have them, tell the officer that you want to remain silent, or that you want to consult a lawyer before answering any questions.

The ACLU of Oregon is not a direct legal service provider. We engage in “impact litigation” which usually means cases that have the ability to effect systemic change for a large number of people or move the law in the direction of a more just, equitable and caring democracy. If you think your rights have been violated or you have seen a pattern of violations of rights in your community, you can let us know about it at <https://intake.aclu-or.org/>.
